Q.2 Write an essay on the Gardener's view.

The Gardener's view encompasses the philosophy that life is a continuous process of growth and nurturing, much like tending to a garden. This perspective emphasizes the importance of care, patience, and dedication in cultivating both plants and human relationships. A gardener understands that every plant, like every person, has unique needs and potential. By providing the right environment, nutrients, and protection, a gardener fosters growth and beauty. This view can be applied to various aspects of life, including education, personal development, and community building, underscoring the belief that with effort and care, positive outcomes can be achieved.

Q.3 Why is it necessary to possess social roles?

Possessing social roles is necessary for the smooth functioning of society. Social roles define the responsibilities and expectations associated with different positions in a community, such as those of a parent, teacher, or leader. By adhering to these roles, individuals contribute to the stability and order of society. These roles facilitate cooperation, create a sense of identity and belonging, and help in the distribution of tasks and resources. Moreover, they provide a framework for behavior, guiding individuals on how to act in various
